

EISENHOWER FLY-ER

November 19, 2023

Message from the Principal

Recently I came across this quote, "Gratitude unlocks the fullness of life. It turns what we have into enough." At this time of year, it is important to take inventory of what we have and be thankful. I am truly thankful for the group of staff, students and families that we have at Eisenhower! We are having an excellent year and are excited looking forward.

We are fortunate in our district to have many people who look to provide great opportunities for kids. Thank you to them! Some of those opportunities are below, including some holiday opportunities, a tennis opportunity, and an opportunity to support the Clay High School Limelighters.

Please see the flier below on our canned food drive that supports our Oregon community. If you are able, please send in cans this Monday and Tuesday! Also, please take a moment to scan the QR code below as it will take you to a video from Mr. Haar and the Student Council about a partnership opportunity Monday afternoon from 4-6 at the library. Thank you!

Just a reminder that we only have school Monday and Tuesday this week. Have a great Thanksgiving!

Sincerely,

Tim Holcombe

Storytelling is a great way to promote literacy and build familiar bonds. Parents, share with your children what weekend mornings were like when you were their age. What traditions did you and your family uphold? Ask your child to retell your family memories.	Be word collectors! Collect 10 new or interesting vocabulary words as you hear or read them this week. Write them down and post them where you will see them this week. Try to use them in sentences out loud together.	Our days get busy, and sometimes we forget to say "thank you" to the people who make our lives so very special. For each person in your family, make a list in words and/or pictures of three reasons you are thankful for them. Hang your lists up for everyone to see.	Play "mystery object." One person thinks of an object, and the other has to guess what they are thinking. They may ask each other questions starting with "who", "what", "when", "where" or "why" to determine the answer. Practice pausing after each question. Pausing to think teaches children the give and take of conversation.
Parent, ask your child what he or she is reading at school. Encourage him or her to share details including the characters, setting, conflict, and message of the book or story. Discuss books or stories you remember reading from your childhood and what you learned from them.	Read (or create) a picture book, graphic novel or comic book together. Picture books help children develop critical thinking skills as their brains take in the picture and the text and make connections between the two.	Start a story together as a family. One person starts the story and tells one to three sentences. Then the next person takes over and adds the next one to three sentences. See how everyone weaves their own interests and imagination into the plot	Fun with Family History. Did Great Grandpa fight in a World War? Was your grandma born in a different country? Write or talk about an important event in your family's history. Knowing where you came from is important to gaining a strong sense of identity.
Discuss: Imagine that you were going on vacation, instead of school or work. Where would you go? How long would you stay? What is the weather like and what will you do? What should you pack? This is a great way to practice giving descriptions and making smart decisions.	Share stories about what your school days were like and compare your experience with everyone in your family. We think you'll find the learning process and in-school gadgets have changed quite a bit over the years.	Together, write a letter, email, or text to a faraway friend or family member. Talk about what you might say or which fond memories you may share with the recipient.	Unplug! Set aside time when all screens are off. Everyone grab a book and read! Discuss what each person is reading.
